President's Message: Interim President Nancy Etok

I am honoured to address you as the Interim President of Pauktuutit Inuit Women of Canada, as we celebrate 40 years of empowering Inuit Woman. Following the tenure of President Gerri Sharpe, I am grateful for the opportunity to lead this incredible organization that has been at the forefront of advocating for Inuit women, children, and gender-diverse individuals in Canada.

Pauktuutit's mission to foster a greater awareness of the needs of Inuit women and gender-diverse people is more critical now than ever before. As an Inuk woman representing Nunavik, Ungava, I am committed to advancing the inclusion, advancement, and success of Inuit women, girls, and gender-diverse Inuit.

I want to express my thanks to President Sharpe for her exceptional leadership and dedication to Pauktuutit. Under her guidance, Pauktuutit achieved significant milestones nationally and internationally, advocating for Inuit women in various forums and promoting their empowerment and leadership.

As we look ahead, Pauktuutit remains committed to advancing the full participation of Inuit women, children, and gender-diverse Inuit in decision-making processes affecting their health, safety, economic and social security, and leadership. We are developing plans to collaborate more closely with our Inuit and Indigenous partner organizations as we prepare for potential changes in government.

I look forward to working closely with the board and our partners to continue the critical work of Pauktuutit. Together, we will strive to ensure that the voices of Inuit women, children, and gender-diverse Inuit are heard and respected.

Thank you for your ongoing support of Pauktuutit. Together, we can create positive change for Inuit we represent.

Inuk Woman of the Year & Young Inuk Woman of the Year

Every year, Pauktuutit's Board of Directors chooses two remarkable women to be honored with the titles of Inuk Woman of the Year and Young Inuk Woman of the Year.

This year, President Gerri Sharpe, presented the Inuk Woman of the Year and Young Inuk Woman of the Year awards at Pauktuutit's Annual General Meeting on February 14 in Ottawa. Both winners joined us virtually to receive their award.

Janine Lightfoot from Makkovik, Nunatsiavut, was named this year's Inuk Woman of the Year.

Janine is a passionate advocate for revitalizing Inuit language and culture in an area deeply affected by language erosion. Janine holds a degree in Political Science and Native Studies and completed the Aurniarvik Program at the Pirurvik Centre in Iqaluit, where she resided and worked for several years, and whose work inspires Janine to find ways to incorporate Inuktitut into all areas of her life.

In addition to her academic achievements, Janine's efforts include initiating free weekly Inuktitut classes for learners, organizing enriching workshops centered around hunting, culture, and revitalization, and establishing a memorial bursary for high school students prioritizing Inuktitut, all done in loving memory of her Anaansiak, Clara Ford. Currently, Janine resides in Makkovik with her family, including their fierce and thoughtful 11-year-old, Panik Aaju Morgan, who dreams of becoming an astronaut.

Alyssa Carpenter, originally from Inuvik, has been named this year's Young Inuk Woman of the Year.

Alyssa is a northern social worker currently residing in Whitehorse, Yukon, with her partner and daughter. A majority of her work experience is within the grassroots and non-profit sector, working with various levels of government in both the Yukon and Northwest Territories, primarily with Arctic and Northern Indigenous youth.

Alyssa is the leading founder and Project Director of the Western Arctic Youth Collective, a youth-led organization based in Canada's Western Arctic region that focuses on empowering young people and promoting positive change in the community through on-the-land programming. Alyssa is a Laureate of the Arctic Inspiration Prize Youth Category for 2020.

Recent Initiatives

Health

Since its establishment in 1984, Pauktuutit has prioritized enhancing the well-being of Inuit women and their families. Today, the Board and staff continue to actively address various aspects of Inuit health and well-being.

Mental Health

In October 2023, Pauktuutit participated in the National Summit on Indigenous Mental Wellness in Ottawa. We were honoured to join the Indigenous Youth Mental Wellness Panel to share our Youth Gender Equality work.

Additionally, in November, Pauktuutit travelled to Iqaluit for the Knowledge Exchange Forum on Men and Boys Programming, hosted by ITK and members of the National Inuit Suicide Prevention Strategy working group. The forum gathered participants from across Inuit Nunangat to discuss programming in their communities and learn from others.

Midwifery

The National Inuit Midwifery Forum in March 2023 reaffirmed Pauktuutit's commitment to bringing birth back to Inuit communities. The forum aimed to revitalize Inuit culture, language, and traditional birth practices while reclaiming Inuit sovereignty over reproductive health and birthing.

The 'What We Heard Report' from the National Inuit

Midwifery Forum has been completed, with plans to release it in Spring 2024, discussing the forum's learnings and providing a pathway forward for midwifery in Inuit Nunangat.

Sexual and Reproductive Health

Pauktuutit is actively engaging with federal, provincial, territorial, and Inuit organizations on several sexual health concerns, including HPV and Hepatitis C elimination, and the emerging crisis of syphilis and congenital syphilis. We attend meetings and conferences to advocate for actions to combat these health issues and improve outcomes for our communities.

Sexual Health in Young Adults

This season, Pauktuutit continued regional engagement sessions with youth and service providers on the Ungava and Hudson coasts of Nunavik. Youth provided insights on Inuit sexual health services and information needs, leading to discussions with Pauktuutit staff on developing ideal Inuit sexual health resources for youth. Pauktuutit is now adapting this information into youth-centered sexual health supports.

Pauktuutit is also planning the first meeting of the Innasaat Katimajit- Sexual Health Youth Committee, comprised of Inuit youth across Canada, to guide messaging and sexual health resource development.

Pauktuutit hosted a land, culture, and arts retreat for Montrealmiut in Oka National Park.

CheckUp! Project

The CheckUp! project is an Inuit-specific initiative focused on preventing sexually transmitted blood-borne infections (STBBI) in Inuit youth. Through social media interventions, the project empowers youth to navigate the healthcare system and normalize testing.

In February, Pauktuutit partnered with Native Montreal to host a land-based culture and arts retreat in Oka National Park. Activities like sealskin sewing, throat-singing, and qulliq lighting helped participants connect sexual health, body image, identity, and our relationship to the land. The weekend aimed to promote healthy relationships, discuss gender, and reduce the stigma associated with sexual health.

Cancer

In November, Pauktuutit visited Inuvik to engage community members about their experiences in seeking care for cancer and discuss the support available through our Inuusinni Aqqusaaqtara – My Journey toolkit. Objectives included providing an opportunity for Inuvialummiut (Inuvialuit Inuit) and Inuvialuit service providers to engage in knowledge transfer, brainstorming, and advocacy, as well as creating a space for cancer patients and their care providers to share experiences.

Social and Economic Development

Pauktuutit's Social and Economic Development team has a broad mandate that covers a range of social and economic issues.

Inuit Women in Business Network

Pauktuutit's Inuit Women in Business Network (IWBN) continues to deliver community-specific programming, both virtually and in person. New project deliverables, including resources on finding and applying for grants, employment practices, and technical training on federal procurement opportunities are being finalized now and will be available on the IWBN website soon.

These resources, along with other research deliverables, were presented to the Canadian Northern Economic Development Agency (CanNor) during their national retreat in Ottawa in January 2024. Look out for the release of new resources on budgeting, operations, and marketing, as well as a research report exploring access to federal procurement opportunities for Inuit businesses.

Inuit Women in the Resource Extraction Sector

Pauktuutit has been actively participating in national forums related to the resource extraction industry, providing insights that align with Pauktuutit's GBA+ framework. We continue to be consulted at these forums based on our project work, which highlights the need for increased Inuit women's participation in the sector at the community, regional, and national levels.

Inuit-specific Shelters and Transitional Housing

Pauktuutit Inuit Women of Canada successfully advocated for federal funding, leading to the commitment to build and operate shelters and second-stage transitional housing for Inuit women, children, and gender-diverse individuals escaping gender-based violence in both urban areas and Inuit Nunangat.

Inuit Nunangat

Inuit-specific shelters and transitional housing initiatives are progressing across Inuit Nunangat, with approvals and applications underway. In Nunavut, approvals have been granted for shelters and transitional houses in Sanikiluaq, Pangnirtung, Baker Lake, and Gjoa Haven. Similarly, Puvirnituq in Nunavik has received approval for a shelter and transitional housing project. In Inuvialuit, applications for shelters in Aimayunga and Ulukhaktok and a transitional house in Tuktoyaktuk, NWT, are under review. Additionally, Nunatsiavut has submitted a shelter application for Makkovik and for a transitional housing project in Nain, which is currently under Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC) review.

Pauktuutit has highlighted the challenges posed by southern timelines on northern projects, advocating for flexibility as the project sunsets on March 31, 2026, which may not align with the needs of projects in Inuit Nunangat.

Urban Areas

Urban areas are also advancing shelter and transitional housing initiatives, with applications from Ottawa, Montreal, and Winnipeg under review. Winnipeg has also applied for a transitional house, while CMHC is reviewing Edmonton's transitional house application.

Pauktuutit has emphasized the need to support urban Inuit groups' capacity for applications and infrastructure development during the Indigenous Shelters and Transitional Houses Steering Committee meetings. healthy behaviours among youth, contributing to safer and more inclusive communities.

Violence, Abuse Prevention & Justice (VAP&J)

Pauktuutit is dedicated to addressing a wide spectrum of issues affecting the safety and well-being of women, children, and gender-diverse Inuit.

Realigning Policy Focus

Pauktuutit has recently realigned its VAP&J policy focus under two main areas: Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls (MMIWG), and Policing. These areas serve as entry points that address intersecting issues, such as child welfare, family violence, housing (under MMIWG), and violence prevention, criminalization, and over-incarceration (under Policing). This realignment includes additional staffing, including a manager with over two decades of experience in policy, research, and advocacy, and new policy analysts.

Pauktuutit remains committed to its key areas of focus. We have provided briefings on initiatives like the Red Dress Alert and contributed to submissions for the United Nations Council on the Status of Women, advocating for Inuit women, girls, and gender-diverse Inuit at every political level.

Engaging Young Men and Boys: Challenging Gender Norms in Addressing Gender-based Violence

This project is a crucial step towards fostering healthy conversations around masculinity, relationships, community, and violence among Inuit boys and young men. This initiative aims to address issues related to sex, sexuality, and sexual violence by engaging with the younger generation. As part of this effort, the project delivered the Ajuqiqtuq Parenting Life Skills workshop in Ulukhaktok, NWT, providing valuable insights and tools for parents and caregivers. The Parenting Life Skills toolkit will be distributed as soon as it is completed.. This project highlights Pauktuutit's commitment to promoting respectful and healthy behaviours among youth, contributing to safer and more inclusive communities.

Pauktuutit hosted a workshop to engage young men and boys in discussions about managing emotions, healthy coping skills, self-worth, self-respect and self-esteem.

Survivors of Intimate Partner Violence and the Family Justice Systems Response

Pauktuutit’s project, “Survivors of Intimate Partner Violence and the Family Justice Systems Response,” is dedicated to improving support for survivors of intimate partner violence (IPV) within the family law system. The project aims to achieve this by increasing access to training, guidance, and resources that promote trauma-informed practice among family law practitioners, including legal aid professionals and court workers.

Targeting law and community worker students at Toronto’s George Brown College, the project delivered its first workshop. Valuable insights and tools were offered to future practitioners to support survivors of IPV. Watch for the upcoming Saimaniik training toolkit, which will further enhance support systems for survivors across the nation.

The Spotlight Initiative: Gender Equality Community Dialogue

Pauktuutit’s “The Spotlight Initiative: Gender Equality Community Dialogue,” will foster community understanding of gender equality and the rights of Inuit women in leadership. Through dialogues, it will gather recommendations on gender issues like violence, access to justice, stereotypes, and healthcare. The project will empower Inuit youth to advocate for gender equality, reflecting our commitment to empowering communities to address systemic challenges.

GBA+ Framework

To complement our Inuit-specific GBA+ Framework, we are currently developing culturally responsive GBA+ learning modules. These modules will be used for staff training, focusing on both workshop-based and online self-guided learning. We aim to complete this work before our June board meeting to enhance our commitment to gender-based analysis plus in an Inuit context.

Additionally, there have been ongoing efforts to collaborate with government partners, including recent training sessions with Employment and Social Development Canada (ESDC) to showcase Pauktuutit and its GBA+ Framework.
